NEED MORE ROOM FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL STUDENTS

On Monday, January 5, 1931, work was resumed in all rooms of the Jefferson district quite agreeably. All the teachers and pupils were present and everyone was eager for work after the holiday vacation.

Although Santa Claus had been very generous and there was plenty of good things on every table, still no one had gone too far and as a consequence all were better after the pleasures they had enjoyed.

Several rooms in Woodrow Wilson, Vista Grande and General Pershing schools were crowded to their full capacity, but no complaint was made as all the teachers are firm believers in the old maxim, "Make the best of whatever comes or doesn't come."

Miss Mary Zipser, one of the ambitious home girls, was employed as a helping teacher to relieve too much congestion in the General Pershing school.

The Stan rd achievemtn test given all the eigh.. grades of the district before vacation, resulted in the following passing above the required standard and being permitted to enter high school, through the wise cooperation of Principal James Ferguson of the Jefferson Union high school:

Evelyn Hammer, Carmela Morgan, Roland Stahl, Dolores Bentley, Alto Buren, Frederick Dragoo, Vehle Keithley, Helen Monoghan, Mae Burdahl, Florence Oliver, Catherine McKeown, Richard Spencer, Robert Ivison, Cathreine Gust, Lena Sampino, Frank Ramey, Ulyss Cashion, Frances Wilson, Joseph Nelson, Norma Conti, Josephine Flanagan, Kathleen Chapman, Irene Banfield, Robert Jacona, William Schauer, Kathryn Hurlbut, Ida Chicca, Stanley Barskey, Robert Smith, Bernice Blume, Mildred Monsees, Angeline Graham, Dominick Valetta, Alvin Arata, Anita I. Mooney, Margaret McKell, Dorothy Fuchs, Marjory Coutts.

The leader of this group was Evelyn Hammer of the Woodrow Wilson school. As usual the good angel remembered to reward her with five dollars for her achievement.

The time has come to take steps at once to provide more school room. The number of children is increasing daily, tangible evidence that our population is not decreasing.

There is every reason to suppose that in the future more people will locate here, since the surroundings are so inviting. When they come there will be more children to be accommodated with school facilities.

For many years it has been the excellent reputation of our school trustees that there was always a comfortable seat in some room under a conscientious teacher for every child that sought entrance. That reputation must be maintained, because it has done much to make our municipality what it is today.

It will not do to wait until the demand for school accommodation is so great that it can not be met. It takes time to bond the district for the necessary funds, and again more time to erect the buildings.

Two buildings, of four rooms each, are needed, one near the Woodrow Wilson school, another adjacent to the Crocker Tract.

Fortunately no more land need be purchased at present for sites as the trustees have been so farseeing that they have purchased additional lots, now and then, when the opportunity presented itself, so the locations are secured. Now is a most opportune time in which to build. All needed material is obtainable at very reasonable prices and, besides, the market for bonds is decidedly favorable.

Last, but not least, activity at present will give a number of mechanics an opportunity to obtain a few days' work and in a small measure contribute toward overcoming the depression.

Speaking of the unemployment reminds the writer that incidentally a commendable act of consideration was performed by the children of the Jefferson school, Colma, during the first week of this year. The report came to school that a number of children of the community were in need of the common necessities of life. The teachers told their pupils about the unfortunate condition and suggested that offerings to relieve the want be brought the next day. The following day revealed the sympathy and goodheartedness of the parents and children. The so-called office was half filled with offerings of food, consisting of all kinds of fresh vegetables, an assortment of canned goods, dozens of eggs, bread, sugar, lard, and even a chicken. In addition to food, raiment was not forgotten, as clothes and shoes were brought, too.

AWARD CONTRACT FOR RESERVOIR

The contract for the work of excavating for the new reservoir for the municipal water supply of the city was awarded to Guerin Bros., last Monday night, at the regular meeting of the City Council. The successful bidders promised the members of the City Council that they would employ as many local men as possible in the completion of the work.

Bids were received on the liability and property damage insurance for the city's cars, but as there was quite a variation in the figures, decision on this matter was postponed for two weeks.

A communication was received from the Market Street Railway Company, applying for the usual annual license and permit to blast for quarrying purposes within the limits of Daly City, in their quarry located near the junction of Mission street and San Jose avenue. The permit was granted.

The application of Miss Watts, of Los Banos avenue, for a permit to wire her house was referred to the building committee.

A communication was received from the Downall Sheet Metal Works, inquiring as to whether chimneys should be run from the ground or put up on brackets. The communication was referred to the building committee.

A letter of thanks was received from Station No. 4 of the Fire Department, thanking the Council for the $100 that they received for their station.

The monthly report of the health officer was read and ordered filed.

MAYOR APPEALS FOR AID FOR RED CROSS

Mayor H. H. Smith of Daly City, with other mayors in the county, has issued a proclamation asking citizens of this community to take cognisance of the proclamation issued by President Herbert Hoover asking for funds to assist a special work by the American Red Cross in relieving a critical condition in twenty-one states.

A fund of $10,000,000 is being raised for relief work in Arkansas and other states. Destitution and suffering exists as an aftermath of the drouth and depression.

Mayor Smith says:

"If any citizen can assist financially without stinting himself, he will be aiding a great humanitarian cause. President Hoover, fully cognisant of conditions, has made a national appeal. As mayor of Daly City, I am making a local appeal. The local Chapter of the Red Cross will take care of your donations. Give what you can and relieve the suffering of your fellow man."

H. H. SMITH.

DALY CITY BOWLER ENTERS TOURNAMENT

Al Studinger, crack Daly City bowler, has entered the Examiner's Northern California championship bowling tournament. Al, who is one of the few spin ball artists, when right is a tough hombre to beat. "Stude," as he is known in bowling circles, has entered from the Jones street Golden Gate Recreation alleys. The qualifying round is now under way, after which there will be five weeks of elimination contests. Here is hoping that "Studie" brings home the bacon, and puts Daly City on the bowling map.

FORRESTERS INSTALL OFFICERS

The following officers were installed by the Ancient Order of Foresters, No. 253, last Wednesday night: Mrs. L. Pezzola, Worthy Grand Deputy; Mrs. V. Dillon, Chief Companion; Mrs. S. Bowen, Sub-Chief; Mrs. M. Parker, Financial Secretary; Mrs. L. Linhares, Treasurer; Mrs. M. Brown, Recording Secretary; Mrs. J. Dougherty, Past Chief; Mrs. F. Rickman, Right Guide; Mrs. G. Carl, Left Guide; Mrs. Herring, Inner Guard; Mrs. J. Jordan, Outer Guard; Mrs. F. Bryant, Marshal; Mrs. Clarrise Nassey, Flag Bearer.

A delicious banquet was served and enjoyed by the assembled guests. A new member, Mrs. Graham, was also initiated.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ORGANIZES JUNIOR C. E.

Miss Louise Wahl, representative of young peoples' organizations, visited Grace Presbyterian church on Thursday evening, when she organized a group of Juniors into a Christian Endeavor Society. Among the officers elected were Hazel Liljeberg, president; Ethel Miller, secretary; Doris Mansau, treasurer. They have agreed to meet every Thursday evening at 7 o'clock.

RANCHERS OPPOSE PEST HOUSE PLAN

Ranchers and home owners of the San Mateo county coast district are reported to be up in arms over proposed location of a new San Francisco jail and isolation hopital at Pillar point, adjoining Princeton, just north of Half Moon Bay.

Information that options are being sought on a number of ranches adjoining Princeton, and that one option of 240 acres has already been secured by San Francisco officials, was made public last Monday night by speakers at a meeting of the Coastside Civic Union at Half Moon Bay.

It is reported that many of those attending the meeting declared that they will not tolerate any proposal to "make a San Francisco pesthouse" of the beautiful scenic region where hundreds have established summer homes, and where thousands gather each summer to enjoy fishing and bathing at the beaches along the coast.

Ranchers of the Princeton district called on Supervisor Manuel Francis, of Half Moon Bay, for an expression of sentiment, and declared they will circulate a petition opposing the move. It was the first intimation, they said, of the intention of San Francisco to place her new jail and pest house headquarters near their homes.

Supervisor Francis said final approval must be given by the San Mateo county board of supervisors, and that the matter had not yet been discussed. He intimated that interests of the property owners throughout the coast district will receive due consideration.

More than a dozen speakers expressed indignation over the reported proposal of San Francisco to locate her "undesirable institutions" in San Mateo county. They pointed out that the tuberculosis sanitarium of San Francisco has been established near Redwood City, that Mills Field of more than 1,000 acres is being acquired by San Francisco, and that with the taking over of former Spring Valley Water Company properties, the big city to the north is in control of altogether too much area in the county.

Petitions will be circulated in opposition to the move, and further discussion will be taken up at the next meeting of the Union, scheduled for February 9 at San Gregorio.

HOME SAVED BY FIREMEN

On Decemeber 30, fire partially destroyed the home of Mrs. Ed. Dugan, 289 Hillcrest Drive. Mrs. Dugan had invited a group of friends in for New Year's eve. She was preparing for their entertainment and was cooking an enormous turkey and a lot of other good things to eat, when the stovepipe became overheated, and the roof caught fire. The blaze was soon discovered by a neighbor, who turned in an alarm and the firemen responded almost immediately. Thanks to their heroic efforts, the fire was soon extinguished. The damage was fully covered by insurance. Mrs. Dugan has a word of praise for the valiant firemen and courteous policemen, who did everything possible to make her comfortable during the fire, which for a time threatened the home.

RECKLESS AUTO DRIVER HITS SAFETY STATION

Last Saturday night at 10 o'clock Sergeant Hilton of the Daly City police force arrested P. Armosa, of 206 Sagamore street, Ocean View, on a charge of reckless driving, after he had hit the safety station at Mission street and Los Olivos avenue. Armosa appeared before Judge Ellis C. Johnson last Monday morning and paid a fine of $35.

BAYSHORE ROAD GIVEN STATE AID

Paving of the Bayshore boulevard from Broadway in Burlingame to Willow road, opposite Dumbarton bridge, and extension of the road through Palo Alto to a point level with Mountain View, is provided in the budget submitted by Governor Rolph to the state legislature.

The budget carries a total of $265,354,955 with which to run the whole state for the biennium. Of this amount $39,100,000 is provided for new construction and reconstruction of the state highway system. Northern California receives $21,146,000 of this amount, and Southern California $17,954,000.

The San Mateo job is estimated to cost a total of $587,650, of which $22,450 is alloted for paving the three miles from Broadway to Fifth avenue. An additional $315,200 is allcted for paving the stretch through Belmont, San Carlos and Redwood City to the crossing of Willow road, opposite the Dumbarton bridge.

San Mateo and Santa Clara counties are joint participants in the other contract included in the budget, that for extension of the Bayshore through Palo Alto from Willow road to Alviso road, a distance of 9.3 miles, and for bridges across San Francisquito and Stevens creeks. For the extension of the road, including paving and grading, a total of $763,850 is allowed. For the bridges the budget provides $65,000.

LADIES' NIGHT AT COMPANY NO. ONE

It was Ladies' Night at Company No. 1 fire house last Saturday evening, January 10. A hot dinner was served at 10 P. M., and but one thing was lacking, the absence of the Captain, who was suffering from a severe cold, and it was up to Lieutenant D. Wood to act as toastmaster.

Mr. Charles Langendorf, of the Langendorf Bakery, had donated a large cake on which was inscribed "Success to Company No. 1," which was appreciated by all. Captain Dormoy, who is an employe of the Langendorf Company, was sick and unable to be present. Mrs. Dormoy acted as hostess of the evening, and she declares the best dance she had was with Chief Kennedy.

The invited guests were Chief Kennedy and wife, Assistant Chief Hansen and wife, Assistant Chief Chesney and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Reardon, Fire Marshal A. Banfield, Mr. G. Schenk, Mr. and Mrs. D. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Harmon, and Mrs. H. H. Smith. The mayor was unable to be present on account of previous business engagements.

Two musicians from San Francisco furnished the music with banjo and saxophone, assisted by Captain W. Harmon of the First Aid, with his accordion.

Dancing was continued until a late hour, all present declaring that Number One's party was a great success.

STUDENTS CRASH INTO TREE

Injured when the car in which they were riding crashed into a tree on El Camino Real, in Burlingame, last Monday, two Stanford students and a young woman are suffering from schock and bruises. George Paddleford, 308 Union, Stanford University, told police the mishap occurred when he fell asleep at the wheel. Riding with him were his brother, U. T. Paddleford, and Miss Katherine Keller of Santa Clara.

BURKE'S SLAYER FREED BY JURY

As a result of the action of the grand jury, Antone Anderson, giant fisherman of Crockett, has been freed of guilt in the matter of shooting two men aboard his fishing boat, the Ruth Roland, near Burlingame on April 30 of last year. The jury, by a vote of 10 to 4, decided against bringing a charge of murder against Anderson.

Anderson, who shot former Game Warden Jack Burke, of Daly City, and Game Warden Allen Curry, of San Francisco, was first arrested and charged with murder. The murder charge was reduced to a charge of manslaughter when the fisherman was given a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace J. J. McGrath of San Mateo.

When Anderson appeared in the Superior Court last Monday to be tried on a charge of manslaughter, District Attorney Swart asked that the manslaughter charge be dropped, and that the grand jury consider the caes and bring in another charge of murder. District Attorney Swart said that he would not try the case on a charge of manslaughter. The charge was, therefore, dropped by Judge Buck and the grand jury was instructed to investigate the case. Witnesses were examined by the grand jury, and Anderson himself was called before the inquisatorial body. After a long deliberation the grand jury declined to bring a charge against Anderson. It is authoritatively stated that no further charge will be brought against Anderson, and that he will not be rearrested.

Anderson shot Burke and Curry when the two men sought to board his boat on the bay a short distance off shore from Burlingame. Both men were killed, and Anderson put into fisherman's wharf, in San Francisco, with the two bodies.

It was claimed by the fisherman that he shot the two men in self defense when they opened fire on him with their pistols. Anderson was shot several times in the abdomen and was in a critical condition when he brought his craft to the wharf. It was at first thought that his wounds would prove fatal, but due to his great strength he finally recovered from his injuries.

The case has attracted widespread interest, due to the interesting angles in the matter. It was peculiar in one respect, in that Anderson, the accused, was the only witness, and that no evidence could be found to discredit his story of the killing. It also caused a slight legal tangle due to the fact that the shooting occurred aboard a boat from San Francisco, yet on the bay off San Mateo county.

It was at first planned to try Anderson in this county, owing to the fact that the shooting was done here. San Francisco officials claimed, however, that the law provided that a crime committe on a boat could be tried in any county through which that boat passed during the trip on which the crime had been committed. As Anderson was at that time in the St. Francis hospital in San Francisco, arrangements were made to try him in that county. Later, however, the scene of the trial was again shifted and Anderson was brought to San Mateo county for trial.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS INSTALL OFFICERS

Last Tuesday evening, January 13, the newly elected officers of Vista Grande Camp, Royal Neighbors, were installed, the ceremony taking place in the Eagles Hall. Mrs. D. Putney and Mrs. H. H. Smith were the installing officers, being assisted by Mrs. J. Jordon and Mrs. Rampie. Mrs. Florence Bryant was the retiring Oracle.

The officers installed were: Oracle, Mrs. D. Burdick; Vice-Oracle, Mrs. J. Jorgensen; Chancellor Mrs. L. Landini; Receiver, Mrs. L. Nelson; Recorder, Mrs. J. Headvall; Musician, Mrs. G. Gehringer; Marshal, Mrs. A. Smith; Assistant Marshal, Mrs. D. Putney; Inside Sentinel, Mrs. A. Romer; Outside Sentinel, Mrs. E. Twesten; Flag Bearer, Mrs. C. Scott; The new Oracle appointed as Graces, Mesdames J. Jordan, H. Cliver, M. Orr, H. Phzbrowski, and H. Owen. Refreshments were served after the meeting, with Mrs. H. H. Smith as hostess.

THE CROCKER DE MOLAY DANCE

On Tuesday evening, January 22, Crocker Chapter Order of De Molay will hold a "Two-bit Jigg" in the Crocker Masonic Temple. Music will be supplied by the "Play Boys," a very peppy orchestra. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. The dancing will start at 8:30 P. M., and will continue until 12 P. M.. Admission is 25 cents. And please do not wear cords.

COUNTY MAY HAVE ANOTHER JUDGE

A second superior judge will be created in San Mateo county if a bill being prepared for introduction to the state legislature is passed, according to Superior Judge George H. Buck.

The rapid growth of San Mateo county in population and in the number of cases filed each year was given by Judge Buck as the primary reason for an addition to the judiciary department.

Judge Buck stated that in 1910 there were 470 civil and criminal cases filed in his court. In 1930 they had increased more than 300 per cent, with the total in excess of 1,400.

An increase of more than 100 per cent in probate cases was also noted for the same period, with 1910 showing 209 cases filed and in 1930 more than 430 were filed.

Judge Buck, who celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday last Sunday, stated he had been working night and day, including Sundays, to keep up with his court calendar. Due to his advanced age, he does not feel that he can maintain the pace.

Supporters of the measure first decided to introduce it before the legislature as an emergency measure, but it was found upon investigation that this could not be done.

In citing the need for an additional judge, the veteran jurist compared this county with Sonoma county, which has 20,000 less population. This district has two superior judges and is asking for a third.

If an additional superior judge for this district is created, he will be appointed by Governor Rolph, but will not be allowed to ascend the bench until the legislature has adjourned for two months. The term of office will probably be until the next general election in 1932, when voters will elect two superior judges for six year terms.

It is intimated that the supervisors' chambers will be used for the second court room, with Purchasing Agent Ernest Werders' office converted into a jury room. This will necessitate a permanent court stenographer, and will make the housing problem at the court house more acute.

FRANCIS SELECTS NEW COMMITTEES

Supervisor Manuel Franciso, new chairman of San Mateo county's board of supervisors, last Monday named the official county committees for the coming year.

The finance committee, considered the most important of all the county groups, will be made up of Sueprvisors John W. Poole as chairman, Rosalie M. Brown and Thomas L. Hickey. Dr. C. V. Thompson, senior supervisor on the board and last year's chairman, who has been a member of the finance committee for many years, was not named.

Mrs. Brown will head the Community hospital committee and will have as her co-members Supervisors Hickey and Thompson.

The court house and jail committee will be comprised of Supervisor C. V. Thompson as chairman, assisted by Supervisors Hickey and Poole.

Hickey, Thompson and Francis will comprise the Memorial Park committee, and Poole, Mrs. Brown and Francis will be the members of the relief home committee.

After approving claims, the board adjourned until next Monday.

BANNED FROM CITY BECAUSE OF PREMATURE CLEBRATION

Officers Sunderland and Reardon, accompanied by Sergeant Hilton, answered a call to 115 Crocker avenue last Sunday night at 10 o'clock, and placed Frank Demihouse under arrest, he being engaged at that moment in shooting off fireworks in the house. Demihouse was charged with disturbing the peace and locked up for the rest of the night. He was taken before Judge Ellis C. Johnson at 11 o'clock last Monday morning and was given fifteen days in which to find a new place of residence somewhere outside of Daly City. In other words, he is to be exiled from our beloved city.

CALVARY BAPTIST SERVICES

The pastor will speak on "A Pagan Love." At the 6:30 hour there will be shown two educational reels of motion pictures. B. Y. P. U. for all ages meet at 7 P. M. The evening service begins at 8 o'clock. The sermon for the evening will be, "Making Our Choices."

PLITENESS REQUIRED

An angler, who had been trying to hook something for the last six hours, was sitting gloomily at his task when a mother and her small son came along.

"Oh!" cried out the youngster, "do let me see you catch a fish!"

Addressing the angler, the mother said, severely: "Now, don't you catch a fish for him until he says 'Please!'" —Tit-Bits.

WIDE PARKING ON NEW ROAD ASKED

Wide parking spaces along the new San Francisco-Santa Cruz highway will be asked in a petition sponsored by the Coastside Civic Union and addressed to directors of the highway district. C. B. Smith, Clarence Stafford and Col. Felix B. Lacrosse have been named on a committee to confer with highway directors.

Spaces where motorists may park to enjoy the view without interfering with traffic will be asked for at Miramar, Princton and other scenic points along the coast.

The Union has also been asked to endorse a proposed uniform plumbing ordinance for San Mateo county. Farmers should be relieved from compliance with inspection requirement in the ordinance, according to expressions by members of the Union, meeting at Half Moon Bay. Supervisor Manuel Francis, of Half Moon Bay, was among those expressing the opinion that the ordinance should not apply in rural districts.

BETHEL GOSPEL FULL MISSION

Every Sunday is a full day with Bethel Mission. We praise the Lord that when He created this world He set aside one day that we might be able to forget all our business and worldly worries and give our minds over wholly to His praise. Not that we do not praise Him the other six days, because we do; but so much of our time is taken up in other thoughts these days that He gets very little of our time except for Sundays.

Last week we had a glorious time at all services. Brother Savage brought us an inspiring message on living a holy life, at the morning service, and at the evening service, Brother Hollenbeck gave us the real inside information on soul saving, as Brother Hollenbeck has been in revivals all over this country and has been the instrument used by God in bringing hundreds of souls to know the saving, keeping power of our Lord Jesus Christ. We feel his method a good one to follow and let the Holy Spirit do the rest.

If you are searching for that thing called happiness, or if you are looking for something that will satisfy to the fullest extent that longing you have for something different in your life, come out to our services this Sunday and let us help you find your way out of the fog in which you are now traveling.

LOCAL PASTOR TO GO EAST

Rev. John R. Stevenson, of Grace Presbyterian church, has been elected a commissioner to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America. He expects to go to Pittsbugh, Pa., at the end of May, and will probably be gone at least two weeks. This is considered a great honor to the local church, as the only Presbyterian church in San Francisco to share this honor is Trinity Center, of which Dr. H. K. Pittman is pastor.

Last Wednesday a number of ladies spent a delightful afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. Cliver, on San Diego avenue, playing Dutch whist. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess to Mesdames E. Twesten, M. White, A. Welsh, J. Jorgensen, M. Pizzola, D. Putney, H. Cliver, M. Barr, of Daly City, B. Cinnamond, of Oakland, L. Light, C. Harris and A. Peterson, of San Francisco.

Stanley Darnall, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Downall, of Alexander street, had the misfortune to fall off the slide on the play grounds at the General Pershing school, last Monday, and break his arm at the elbow. The victim of the unfortuate accident was carried to a machine by two of the teachers and rushed to a hospital in San Francisco

HALF MOON HAS FIRST ROBBERY IN 20 YEARS

The first burglary in Half Moon Bay in twenty years occurred last Monday night, when prowlers took $500 worth of merchandise from the store of the Half Moon Bay Mercantile Company. Silk lingerie formed a large part of the loot. Five guns, a watch and a number of coats were also taken by the thieves, who forced a rear door. Two men are believed by Constable Fred A. Simmons to have been implicated. The burglars removed the loot in an automobile, which is being traced.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO CAR DEATH HELD ACCIDENTAL

Accidental death was the verdict of a coroner's jury following an inquest at South San Francisco in the killing on January 2 of Mario Uboldi, 45, San Francisco poultry dealer, when a truck in which he was riding crashed into a street car at South San Francisco. Palo Volante, also of San Francisco, driver of the truck, is confined in the South San Francisco hospital with a broken leg and fracture of both arms.

Motorman C. L. Long, in charge of the street car, testified that the truck was driven at a fast rate along the car track on Grand avenue and that it crashed the street car head-on.

For the seventeenth time Frank Fristo, of Champaign, Ill., is in jail for violation of liquor laws.

ABOUT WOMEN

Five times a national women's golf champion and her third straight triumph is the record of Miss Glenna Collett, who recently won the championship trophy at the Los Angeles Country Club.

Elinor Smith has been selected by the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation as the "best woman pilot in the United States."

Mrs. Mary Christmas, of Racine, Wis., announced that she was tired of having store clerks, when they asked her name, say: "The same to you."

All the crockery that is broken in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Sutton, of St. Louis, is cemented to the outside walls as ornamentation.

Wida Frisby, of Columbus, Ohio, who weighs 400 pounds, recently married a man who weighs only 155.

The court ordered that August Nack of Milwaukee must live on the third floor of his home and not annoy his wife pending the outcome of their divorce suit.

The will of Hyman Rosen, late of New York City, gives $5,000 to his widow, and $25,000 to his first wife.

Tied for Sunday school honors, six boys and six girls of St. Ives, England, cast dice and three of each were awarded Bibles as a result.

LABORATORY DEATH DUE TO ACCIDENT

Nathaniel Morgan, 24, Palo Alto electrical engineer and Stanford University graduate, who died in a Drinker respiratory in San Mateo last Tuesday night, was killed by an accidental shock of 3,000 volts of direct current while on duty in the plant of the Federal Telegraph Company at Palo Alto, it was determined at a coroners' inquest in Redwood City. The accident occurred when Morgan pulled an electrical switch attached to experimental apparatus, it was testified. The inquest was held in Redwood City.

OPERATOR SENSES NEED, TELEPHONE MEN RESCUE

When Miss June Pretty, operator for the Illinois Bell Telephone Company at River Grove, Ill., answered a call not long ago, the subscriber asked for a doctor's number. Unable to reach a doctor or to find out what the trouble was, the chief operator summoned Carl Sahilberg, the wire chief, who with a first aid kit and in company with Virgil Tosch, a central office maintenance man, hurried to the address whence the call had come. They found Mrs. Harold J. Higgins with her hand and arm caught in a wringer of an electric washing machine. Applying first aid to her injuries, they rushed her to a hospital for further treatment. This is an example of departmental coordination between Bell System Traffic and Plant departments, as well as of the value of first-aid training.

SETTING THE PACE HANDICAPS GOLF PLAYERS, SAYS JONES

Breaking into the lead at the very start of a championship golf match is a handicap rather than an advantage, in the opinion of Bobby Jones.

Bobby, whose string of golf championships ranks him as the greatest player of all time, writes in the current issue of Liberty Magazine: "I want to say that I do not like making the pace.

"It gets harder and harder as you go. The other fellows, with nothing on their minds but their hair, are shooting the works, while you keep wondering if you hadn't better be careful and try not to lose any strokes, which is the best possible way of losing them.

"It's quite a lot more comfortable a stroke or two back of the pacemaker than up there setting the pace yourself."

"Why, no. What makes you think so?"

"I've been sleeping on his trail for four days. He's either here, or he's heading this way."

"You sure?"

"Not sure, Buck. But he told me he'd be here."

"Told you?" Grogan's forehead knotted in a frown. "You an' Bob gettin' to be side-kicks these days?"

"Listen, Buck. I've got to have some sleep. In forty-eight hours I've hardly had a wink—been in the saddle plowing through drifts most of the time. I don't want it known I'm in town. While I sleep find out for me if Quantrell is here. Last night he stole the two Kentucky horses of my partner. If the horses are in town it ought not to be hard to locate them. Bob may be staying at the house of Manuel Gomez. They say he's in love with Dolores. Not likely he'll stay at the Gomez house, though. He's too wily for that. Find out what you can, but be careful nobody suspects what you're after. When you get back wake me if I'm asleep."

Buck Grogan was a brother of the Texas Kid, who with Shep Sanderson had been killed on the main street of Concho a little more than a year before this time. In his heart he cherished a bitter hatred of the outlaw.

"All right, Sheriff," he said. "You sleep. I'll find out what I can. Hadn't I better let you lay till ten or eleven o'clock?"

"No. If he's here he may hit the trail at daybreak. Soon as you get back wake me up."

O'Hara took off his boots, his coat, and his vest, and settled himself on the bunk. In two minutes he was sound asleep.

When he opened his eyes it was broad daylight. Grogan was standing over him.

"He's here."

"Have you seen him?" asked O'Hara.

"No."

"Who told you he was?"

"You did. I've seen the horses he an' some other guy rode in on. They're stabled in the barn back of Delgado's house."

"Do you know where Bob is?"

"No, I don't. Down in the Mexican quarter, I'd say. I met Gomez on the street an' edged round the subject the least li'l' bit. But you know how greasers are. They won't tell a thing they don't want to."

"You didn't let him know I was here?"

"Do I look like a plumb fool?" Gorgan wanted to know. "Of course I didn't. What I said to Gomez was that I'd heard Dolores' friend was in town, an' when he looked at me real quick I added kinda casual, 'Maria Garcia.' She is, too. Came up from Agua Caliente Tuesday. Manuel was right there with the 'Si, si' stuff, but he was just a mite too late. He'd done give himself away, though I didn't let on for a minute."

"You feel sure Quantrell is in town, then."

"I'd bet six fat three-year-olds against a plug of tobacco that he's not four hundred yards from us right d—n now."

"If he hasn't lit out."

"Tell you I saw the two Kentucky horses."

"He might leave them here to fool me while he's making tracks for parts unknown."

"What would be the sense in that when he could just as well take 'em along? You know how he loves a good horse. No, sir. When he goes those horses go, too. Wouldn't surprise me if he lies low here three-four days. There won't more than half a dozen folks know he's here. He can trust his Mexican friends. They like him, an' they're not civilized enough to betray him."

The last sentence Grogan offered with an ironic grin. Common opinion to the contrary, it is quite true that the Mexicans are as a people very loyal to their friends. During the past year or two as much could not be said of the white population of Jefferson county. While the feud had been in progress most of the ranchmen had not felt any compunction about shifting sides. It was, for instance, not at all remarkable that O'Hara was now depending upon Buck Grogan to help him capture Quantrell, although the two cowboys had fought together against him in the battle at the Circle S O ranch. Yet Grogan was no traitor. The circumstances had changed, and with them his allegiance.

"That sounds logical," O'Hara admitted. "But Quantrell isn't very dependable. He doesn't always do what you'd expect him to do."

"That's so, generally speakin'. But he'll stay put here two-three days an' give his saddle a rest. He's been on the dodge a long time, an' he's right fond of Dolores Gomez. I'd say he'll want to stick around for a while, an' he most always does what he wants to do. He ain't what you'd call a prudent guy. His friends will be keepin' a lookout to see he's not trapped. Yes, sir. He'll be plumb tickled to lie right here in Concho an' fool you."

"Yes, that would be like him," O'Hara agreed. "Will you find out for me whether Steve Worrall has reached town yet? I want to see him."

"Got in late last night—him an' Amen Owen. Their horses were sure whipped out, too."

"Good! Ask him to drop in and see me. He'd better come along the creek and in the back way. Some of Quantrell's friends may be watching him."

"All right. Breakfast first. No, sir. You lie right there. I'll fix us up something."

A couple of hours later Worrall reached the cabin. He and the sheriff talked the situation over. It was decided to keep an inconspicuous watch on the Delgado stable from a side window of the Steelman store. Probably Quantrell would not stir out until night. After dark the Gomez house was also to be kept under observation.

"If his gang is here with him some of the bunch will poke their noses from where they're holed up soon as it gets dark," said Worrall. "Good thing to have quite a few men ready for emergencies, don't you reckon?"

"I think so. See Buckskin Joe and Amen and the Browns. You might speak to McCarthy, too, Steve. Tell them trouble is brewing and may break, but don't let them know what's up. If too many people know a secret it's not one any longer."

O'Hara did not leave the cabin until darkness fell. By a back way he went to the Steelman-McCarthy store where Worrall and Grogan were to meet him. He was eating a supper of cheese and crackers and sardines when Owen joined him.

"'Lo, Amen," he said. "Get all rested from your long ride?"

"Umpha! Say, boy, there's a Mexican baile tonight at the Montez place. If you're all het up to met Bob you might find him among those present."

"What makes you think that?" asked O'Hara.

"You mightn't think it to see me such a stove-up old donker as I am now, but once upon a time I was a kid my own self. As I come down the street I met the Gomez family dressed in their war paint headed for the dance. Includin' Miss Dolores of the black, black eyes. She sure is a right pretty senorita an' I wouldn't blame Bob for wantin' to shake a leg with her. Course I don't say he'll be there. All I'm sayin' is that he might."

"So he might," agreed the sheriff reflectively. "Well, I'm not too old to enjoy a dance. I'll give myself an invitation to be there, too."

Amen Owen grinned. He thought perhaps he had started something. "Uninvited guests ain't always so dog-goned welcome," the old cowboy said. "If you go you're liable to get in a jackpot, don't you reckon?"

"It wouldn't surprise me."

"Bob is top hand with his shootin' irons. I'd say take four of five of us with you."

O'Hara cut a piece of cheese and put it between two crackers. "Can't take a posse into the barn with me. That would mean trouble right away if Bob was there, and I can't risk promiscuous shooting with a lot of women present. If Bob wasn't there, world would reach him in ten minutes that we were hot on his trail. No. I'll leave two or three of you outside and go in alone. I'll take you and Grogan and Baldy Brown. Worrall and McCarthy and Jess Brown will watch the Delgado stable to cut Quantrell off from the horses if he tries for a getaway."

"Is it yore notion that there won't be trouble soon as Bob sees you?" asked Owen with obvious sarcasm. "Guess different. When you go in there right then you're playin' yore hole card—if Bob is at the baile. Now if I kinda drifted in maybe he'd let it ride. Far as we know, he ain't hep to it that I rode on the posse to the Mal Pais. Quien sabe?"

"Dollars to doughnuts that he knows. You rode into town last night with Steve, didn't you? If he's here the info was passed to him almost before you had unsaddled. No, it's my place to go into the barn and see whether he is there. So I'll go."

"You're cock-a-doodle-do of this outfit, Garrett. All I got to say is, look out, you don't buck yore luck onct too often."

"The Lord loves the Irish, Amen," answered the sheriff, his gay smile flashing. "Far as this curly wolf goes, he's just a man like you or me. Don't forget that he has his weaknesses, just as all criminals have. One of Bob's is his vanity. He has to make grandstand plays so that people will fear and admire him. Some day he'll come a cropper on account of it. Maybe that some day is tonight."

"Hmp! Bob ain't the only grandstander in our midst. Right now I'm close enough to spit on another guy who is a h—l-poppin' team his own self. Don't tell me you're against advertisin', boy. I ain't ever noticed that you ride into the encinal to pull off the plays that make folks talk."

The sheriff protested. "I've been driven into doing spectacular things I didn't want to do, but I never did any of them to make people talk. Or if I did the reason was not vanity, but to increase respect for the law."

Owen shrugged his shoulders. "I'll backtrack on you being a grandstander, Garrett. You're not that, an' you're there, boy, both ways from the ace. But that won't keep you from playin' on a golden harp if you're so doggoned careless. Some low-down cuss will plug you one of these days when you walk up to him with no gun in yore fist an' say, 'Consider yoreself under arrest.' I'm warnin' you."

"Maybe you're right and maybe you're not, Amen." O'Hara rose and brushed the crumbs from his clothes. "But I've got to play the hand the way it's dealt. One might as well be cheerful about it as melancholy. How does that song go that Texas Jim sings?

Roll your tail and roll her high,
We'll all be angels by and by.

"Hmp! I've heard preachers deny that, but even if so I aim to postpone my angelin' for a while. Well, let's mosey along."

Outside of the Montez barn four or five young Mexicans were grouped. O'Hara moved forward out of the darkness and greeted them casually.

Gringos Were Not Welcome, Especially Officers of the Law.

He had seen a bottle passing from one to another, but at sight of him activities became suspended. They were surprised to see him. This was a private baile; at least Americans had not been invited. If the sheriff attended it must be in the way of business.

Then on what business? The Mexicans held together against the gringos. If one was wanted by the law his countrymen hid and shielded him. They were suspicious of the administration of justice as worked out by the ruling race.

O'Hara passed into the building. The sounds of stamping feet and the strains of the music filled the barn. Most of those present were dancing and did not observe him, but the men standing near the door expressed in their looks a surprised hostility. This was their demesne. Gringos were not welcome, especially officers of the law.

The sheriff refused to understand the resentment. His smile remained pleasant and friendly though it was a little absent-minded. His eyes were already searching for the man he had come to find. The first survey of the floor failed to find him. There were only Mexicans.

He saw Dolores Gomez. She was dancing with a slender young vaquero in the costume of a caballero. Ranged against the wall were her father and her mother, the latter wearing a black lace mantilla. Juan Garcia was on the floor. In the room were two Hashknife riders. But no Bob Quantrell.

A shift in the position of the dancers brought Dolores and her partner into the foreground. Carelessly O'Hara gaze rested for a moment on the young man with the girl. He was in velvet bell-shaped trousers and a short vest elaborately fringed with gold braid. A wide red sash was fitted tightly to his slim waist. From the costume the sheriff guessed that gallant a vain young man. He was light on his feet, but he went through the figures of the dance hesitantly, as though he had not practiced them very much. Yet he was not abashed when he made a slight mistake but quite self-possessed. A smile lit the swarthy face, and at sight of the two buck teeth that showed above the retreating chin O'Hara's heart lost a beat. In spite of the disguise he knew that the dancer was Bob Quantrell.

And even while the sheriff watched him a man sidled up to the outlaw and dropped a word in his ear. O'Hara knew what the man had said as well as though he had heard him. For Quantrell's glance swept instantly to the door and found the officer. Hard and unwinking, the eyes of the two men met and clashed.

Quantrell knew he had been recognized, and the sheriff knew that he knew it, though the man's feet still kept time to the music. What would he do? O'Hara did not for an instant lift his eyes from the bandit. The price of a moment's inattention might be death.

There was only one door to the barn downstairs and one window. To reach the stairway to the loft it would be necessary for Quantrell to come within eight feet of where the sheriff stood. O'Hara knew the outlaw was thinking furiously. He would guess that the barn was surrounded, that the sheriff had his posse outside. Otherwise his course would be simple, to shoot the officer down and escape in the darkness.

Quantrell murmured something to Dolores. The girl's startled eyes flashed toward the door. She lost step, her mind distracted, then joined her partner and walked beside him from the floor.

The sheriff noticed that she was between him and her lover; that her body protected Quantrell against the chance of gun fire. A quick suspicion shot into his mind. He moved toward the man he wanted, brushing aside those who were in the way, dodging the dancers as he crossed the barn.

O'Hara was too late. He saw the outlaw's teeth flash in an impudent grin, caught a mocking wave of the hand. A streak of color dived through the air. There was a crash of glass. Quantrell had flung himself through the window head first.

Confusion instantly filled the room, which became vocal with screams, imprecations, and the lift of excited Spanish vowels. Men and women pushed this way and that, so that O'Hara found himself caught in the press as he fought his way to the window. The soft bodies of young girls impeded him no less than the muscular ones of lean vaqueros.

From the outside came the sound of shots, staccato reports of battle. The sheriff drew closer to the exit, though in his eagerness to reach the open it seemed to take many minutes rather than moments. He found himself flung against a senorita face to face, so closely that her bosom rose and fell against his heart. Dark, liquid, long-lashed eyes lifted to his. The firm brown flesh of bare arms brushed his cheeks and fingers laced themselves together back of his neck. Dolores Gomez had found another way to serve her lover.

O'Hara tried to push her away. She hung there heavy as a sack of meal. He reached back, caught her wrists, and dragged at them to break the hold. The girl clung desperately to him. Even after he had freed himself she snatched at his coat to detain him.

At last he was at the window. Protecting his face with his arms, he plunged through it to the ground outside.

Some one shouted, "Who is it?"

The voice belonged to Amen Owen. O'Hara called aloud his name. The cowboy ran to him, revolver in hand.

"He got away—that greaser who came through the window. Who was he?"

"Bob Quantrell." The sheriff was already on his feet, his six-shooter out. "Which way did he go?"

"Thataway." Owen waved his hand into the darkness. "He took us by surprise. We didn't know at first but what it was you—not till after he came a-shootin'."

"Anybody hurt?"

"No. Too dark to see. All of us pluggin' away for general results. The boys followed him a little ways, but I called 'em back. Figured it might be a trick to draw us off from the barn. Here are the boys."

Grogan and Baldy Brown joined them.

The sheriff sketched briefly the situation while he hurried down the street with his men.

"That was Bob Quantrell who made the break through the window. He out-generaled me. No question of either of us shooting from where we were. Too many women around. So he came out through the window while I watched the door. He knows we're hot on his trail and he'll try to get away at once. Chances are he'll head toward the Delgado stable for the horses. If so, we'll have another brush with him."

A voice hailed them.

"That's Jess," said Baldy Brown.

It was. Worrall had sent him to find out the cause of the firing.

"Nobody been for the horses yet?" the sheriff asked.

"Not yet. Pankey showed up an' took a look at the horses to see they were all right, then came out again. We didn't even chirp."

"Pankey, eh?"

"Steve was right sure it was Pankey. Couldn't see his face much, but the fellow limped like Pankey does."

Within five minutes they had joined Worrall and McCarthy, who were hidden behind an adobe wall across the road from the stable. They held a hurried low-voiced consultation.

"I've a notion to take a scout around the Gomez place," O'Hara said. "Likely the family won't stay at the dance now, and Bob will try to meet Dolores before he leaves town. Steve, you come with me and look around there. We'll be back soon."

Owen rubbed dubiously the unshaven bristles on his chin. "You're crowdin' that boy consid'rable, Garrett. I done told you he's got more sting to him than a sidewinder. You better stick around here with the rest of us, don't you reckon?"

"When you call for a showdown with Bob you wanta be sure you've got an ace in the hole," Baldy Brown said, drawing a plug of chewing tobacco from his pocket. "He can sure make a busted flush go a long way. An' most usually you'll find his cards are all red when they're flipped over. Now my idea is to sit here an'—"

O'Hara cut curtly into Baldy's discourse. "Not a debating society we're holding. I'm here to capture Bob Quantrell. The way to get him is to go after him. Come along, Steve."

Worrall grinned at Owen and Brown. "String along with Garrett here an' you'll have lively times, boys, long as you have any. My last words are that if I'd lived a better life I wouldn't of been here. All right, Sheriff. Scratch gravel."

O'Hara and his long lean deputy moved away and were lost in the darkness.

"There's a lad, that Garrett O'Hara, who's had more bullheaded luck than a nigger with a rabbit's foot," Baldy drawled, a little resentful. When he was making oration he did not like to be cut off so abruptly.

"Luck yore foot!" scoffed Owen. "He makes his own breaks, Garrett does. He's got guts an' horse sense."

"So have you, old-timer, but I ain't heard anybody shoutin' about what a wonder you are. Coupla years ago this O'Hara was a tenderfoot—didn't know sic' 'em. You wouldn't of said he would be worth a barrel of shucks as sheriff. Now he's the white-haired lad of Jefferson county. Tell me why, if it's not luck."

"Sure I'll tell you why, Baldy. It's because he never quits—goes after bad men like the Watsons. Lights on 'em all spraddled out. On top of that he's straight as a string. That's its shape."

Baldy agreed, still grumbling.

Gomez lived in a large one-story adobe house on the outskirts of the town. He was one of the original settlers. He had driven his longhorns up from Mexico and settled on the creek in the days when the Apaches were still troublesome. Within a few years the town had grown up almost at his doorstep. For a Mexican he was well off. His cows and horses had increased in number. More rooms had been added to the house. He entertained hospitably and was a political leader of his race locally. Dark-eyed sons and daughters, eleven all told, were growing up around him and his still handsome wife. They were attractive young people, devoted to their father and their mother. The gods, it was generally felt, had been very good to him.

American Feels at Home in Great Chinese City

Shanghai, to a notable extent, has become Americanized. There, in the most polyglot city in Asia, the roving American finds all the comforts of home—the radio and jazz bands, cocktails and correspondence schools, night clubs and cabarets, neon lights and skyscrapers, chewing gum and wide trousers and long skirts, evangelists and the Salvation army.

And there, too, he finds such peculiarly American institutions as navy wives, shotgun weddings, Girl Scouts, Spanish-American war veterans, a board of censors, daylight holdups, immaculate barber shops, a short-story club, wheat cakes and a chamber of commerce.

All these things may be, as touring congressmen and other such idealists are fond of saying, the "splendid evidences of American influence in China." They may be the instruments of attaining confraternity between China and America. But I do not think so, says Edgar Snow, writing in the American Mercury. The fact is that nobody in Shanghai worries himself very much about Sino-American understanding. Both the Chinese and Americans are too busy making money.

Snowfall Calculated

The weather bureau says that snowfall that occurs at the government observing stations is reduced to its equivalent in rainfall and included with the latter in determining the amount of precipitation during the year. As a rule the ratio of unmelted to melted snow is 1 to 10—that is, 10 inches of snow will ordinarily make about 1 inch of water.

First Makers of Paper

The art of making paper from fibrous matter seems to have been practiced by the Chinese at a very early date. Some writers believe that the Chinese made such paper at least two centuries B. C. Paper first became available for the rest of the world about the Eighth century through the Arabs, who learned the art of paper making from Chinese prisoners captured in Asia. Before paper was made from fibrous matter papyrus was used for writing purposes.

Geographical Division

The boundary between Canada and the United States is merely a line between the termination of the United States and the commencement of Canada.

Building activity in Modesto for 1930 totals $567,999, according to figures compiled by City Clerk Hiram Gragg. This sum is approximately the same as the 1929 figure.

Proposed route of the Trans-Sierra Lone Pine road project is shown in a map recently completed by Engineer Irvin H. Althouse, a director of the Porterville Chamber of Commerce.

Shipments valued at $1,054,677,533 were handled at San Pedro port during the year just ended, figures compiled by the Marine Exchange show. This is within $19,000,000 of the all time record set for the post in 1929.

Appropriation of $750,000 will be sought at the 1931 Legislature for construction of a new 500 bed hospital at the State Veterans' Home at Yountville, it was announced by Albert Brady, war veteran legislative committee chairman.

State Senator J. M. Inman, Sacramento, is considering introduction of a constitutional amendment at the coming legislative session to extend the term of Governor from four to six years, with the proviso that no Governor shall be eligible to re-election.

Construction of a new $50,000 store building has been started at San Mateo by the Wisnom Estate Company. This is the third building project to be announced there within a few weeks. Construction of a $200,000 theater and a $75,000 bank building will start shortly.

Ventura county will have to abandon its $2,000,000 harbor project under a Supreme Court ruling issued recently. The special act of the Legislature in 1927 creating the Ventura County Harbor District, and providing for development of the harbor, conflict with the general harbor laws of this State, the court held.

Californians consumed 12.7 per cent more candy and sweets in November than in October, according to a survey published by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Twenty-eight state firms reported gross sales of $750,341 for the month of November. For the country as a whole, confectionery sales decreased 2.2 per cent.

The Wutchumna Water Company of Visalia, was fined $500, its secretary, Floyd Heberling, $50, and its ditch tender, Herbert Huff, a like amount, under a contempt finding by Superior Judge S. L. Strother. The company and its officers were accused of taking more water from the Kaweah River than the court had decreed.

Far more rigid state laws for the supervision of California building and loan organizations will be demanded in bills to be introduced by State Senator Herbert C. Jones, of San Jose. "I shall introduce a bill calling for more deputies in the office of the building and loan commissioner or for auditing of all building and loan books by certified public accountants," Senator Jones declared.

Purchase of a two-story brick business building at Santa Rosa by the Investment Property Company of San Francisco from J. A. Tedford, Santa Rosa business man, was announced recently. The purchase price was reported at approximately $90,000. The property was sold subject to a lease to the J. C. Penney Company, it was stated by Tedford, manager of the Penney store. Tedford purchased the property two years ago and subsequently leased it to the Penney concern.

California's population growth between 1920 and 1930 was the highest rate of increase recorded by any state during the decade and the greatest numerical increase ever shown by any state in any census period. The California population was checked as 5,677,251 on April 1, 1930. This was an increase of 2,250,390 or 65.7 per cent over the January 1, 1920, count. The gain puts California now sixth among the states in population, passing Michigan and Massachusetts during the decade. California's total land area is 155,652 square miles, making the average number of inhabitants per square mile 36.5. The figure was 22.0 in 1920.

A new building to house county offices will probably be recommended by the San Mateo County grand jury in its annual report, it was intimated by members at Redwood City. They state the present courthouse is crowded and an addition would mar its architectural beauty. The jury will also probably recommend that a county planning commission be formed by the Board of Supervisors to supervise building in unincorporated areas. It feels a crisis will be reached

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

"It isn't the thing itself—it's the SPIRIT of the thing."

How often have we heard that expression, and how truly! We are reminded of that most famous picture, "Spirit of '76." We see before us the indomitable spirit of courage, confidence, "We Will!"—which is the soul of the picture. There is no gleaming, splendid armor; no large assembly of artillery; no highly developed scientific weapons of warfare—just the SPIRIT that could not know defeat.

The essence of Christianity is the SPIRIT of Christ, and his simple, charitable teachings. The success of the exepedition of Columbus and his discovery of our country can be justly attributed to the SPIRIT of his mighty purpose in Joaquin Miller's "Sail On! Sail On! Sail On and On!"

The success of an influential church, the success of an active club or organization, the success of a progressive onward-moving community—all can be justly attributed to "THE SPIRIT OF THE THING."

Here in Daly City we have (and yet need more) of that humane spirit of charity and simple love that prevails in a spirit of true Christianity; we need the indomitable "Sail On and On and On" spirit that marked the discovery of our country; we need the shining armor—the enduring strength of that spirit depicted in the "Spirit of '76" that could not know defeat; we need that splendid spirit of "community consciousness"—community kindness—COMMUNITY ONENESS to attain and hold our goal of the "One Community in Ten!"

Community spirit! It isn't what we do individually or collectively in this community—it isn't how we do it or what we have to do it with—"it isn't the thing, it's the spirit of the thing."

A Memphis announcer fell in love with a female radio artist's voice and married her. But it will sound like static the first time she bawls him out.

They are talking of deporting Mr. Ponzi. Another good idea that came too late.

STRAY CATS AND DOGS

The zeal of those who stress the importance of kindness to animals may sometimes appear to be a manifestation of sentimentality, yet there is generally behind it a sincere and laudable impulse.

While it may be argued that the sympathy and effort expended on unfortunate animals might better be exerted in behalf of human beings, the fact is that those who treat horses, cats and dogs with humane consideration are more likely to exhibit a similar attitude toward their fellowmen.

A New York woman's organization reports that in a year it found homes for 667 homeless dogs and 549 stray cats, while 68 dogs and 10 cats were returned to their owners through identifying tags or collars. Bronze medals were presented to two men who saved a dog at considerable risk to themselves.

An important work of such organizations is the humane education of children, many if not most of whom have an apparent natural tendency to make life miserable for helpless animals, particularly those not their own. In some cases the mistreatment of animals is merely the result of thoughtlessness and may be checked by kindly admonition; in others there appears to be a tendency toward wanton cruelty, for which sterner measures are necessary to repress.

The teaching of kindness to animals should have a place in the training of every child, and it can be taught better by personal example than in any other way. To befriend a stray cat or dog is to teach a lesson in humaneness to all who observe the act. And such lessons are worth while.

The Government Club, a Chicago womens' organization, requires each members to take this pledge: "I do not endorse communism, socialism, or pacifism."

We await the sequel to the story of burglars who recently stole germinoculated rabbits from a Pittsburgh hospital laboratory.

A SCHOOL OF GOOD WILL

More than 300 American students received training in France during the past eight years under a plan for undergraduate foriegn study originated by the University of Delaware, according to a recent statement by President Hullihen of the university.

These students, carefully selected by teachers in French of the various American educational institutions, are given instruction in a wide choice of subjects at the Foreign Study School in Paris.

The object of the school is to establish a better understanding between France and the United States. The students are given courses in the history, literature, art, drama, government and customs of the French people.

It is pointed out that under the foreign school plan there will gradually come to be a considerable body of colleged trained men and women with a good knowledge of the customs and government of the French people. Upon these graduates American business and the government may draw for personnel especially equipped for future international activities.

The Paris school is doing a fine work in fostering the traditional friendship between France and the United States, and might well be designated as "a school of good will."

MASSACHUSETTS OBJECTS

We read that educational leaders in Massachusetts have at this late day discovered that the use of the abbreviation "Mass." is detrimental to the dignity of the state, and have begun a movement for its suppression. They want the name spelled out in full in all cases.

But if Massachusetts feels slighted by the use of only four letters, other states have even more causes for complaint. Consider Ohio, which is usually represented by only one, "O." And the "O" might possibly be mistaken for a zero, thus adding insult to injury.

The question raised calls to mind the interesting fact that the name of every state has been commonly abbreviated except that of Utah, possibly because "Ut." in handwriting might be confused with "Vt." while "Uh." would suggest an unpleasant sound.

We doubt that the objection of the Massachusetts professors is well taken. Think how many barrels of ink have been saved by the employment of the abbreviated form, which saves nine letters each time it is written or printed, to say nothing of the economy of labor.

We recall one typesetter whose ideas would have pleased the Massachusetts pedagogues, however. He, too, disliked abbreviations, and when he set up a musical article in which reference was made to Mozart's 12th Mass, he made it read "Mozart's 12th Massachusetts."

BUILDING LOAN GROWTH

This month marks the 100th anniversary of the first building and loan association in America, which was organized on the evening of January 3, 1830, by a group of citizens in Frankford, Pa., now a suburb of Philadelphia.

The institution then formed took the name Oxford Provident Association, and the house on which its first loan of $500 was made is still standing.

During the century which has elapsed since the idea was first put into practice, building and loan associations have had a remarkable growth, especially in the last few years. There are now more than 1,200 such associations in the United States with nearly 13 million members, and assets of more than eight billion dollars. Total assets are eight times as great as they were 20 years ago.

These associations have been generally very successful, and have enabled many thousands of people to own their homes who would have been unable to finance them otherwise.

DROUTH MENACED CANAL

One effect of the drouth last summer, which at first glance may seem strange to many, was that it nearly caused the closing of the Panama Canal for deep draft ships.

While there will always be plenty of water at each end of the canal at sea level, in the 32 mile stretch which is many feet above sea level the water for the canal's operation comes from the great artificial Gatun Lake, which is supplied with water from the Chagres River. During the recent drouth the river failed to deliver the usual amount of water, and it was only by the strictess conservation that the depth necessary for large vessels was maintained.

For a time it was feared that these ships might have to discontinue sailings between the Atlantic and Pacific, or go back to the old route around Cape Horn, which would add 8,000 miles to each voyage.

Fortunately, however, rains came in December, just in time to keep the canal open at its usual depth. Now it is planned to create another vast lake for reserve water as a protection against future drouths.

Senator Norris doubtless counts that day lost whose low descending sun has not seen him on the front page.

NEGLECT BLAMED FOR CRIME

The most compelling factor of the undelying cause for the even increasing number of youthful criminals entering reformatories, jails and penitentiaries today lies at the door of society in the neglect to provide for the leisure time activities for boys, especially under-privileged boys, declared William Edwin Hall, member of the New York State Crime Commission, in an address over the radio recently. He continued in part:

"Not long ago I viewed the lineup at police headquarters in New York. I was shocked to see that a very large number of those who had been arrested were boys under 21 years of age. The other day I stood within the gray walls of Sing Sing prison and saw one hundred of the most recent arrivals, and was struck by the fact that these newly arrived convicts were practically all mere boys.

"Month after month there is a continuous stream of youth into the jails and penitentiaries of our country. The average age of the criminal is getting younger and younger. Official records prove that criminals are not made over-night, but evolve from juvenile delinquents.

"The industrialization of our civilization has resulted in the piling up of masses of people in congested areas in large cities. The by-product of this is the cheap tenement and the four-room house. Although our economic system has changed, the impulses, inclinations, and inherent desires of boys have remained the same."

The commissioner urged the adoption of some means whereby boys could have an outlet for their surplus energy that would not lead to the life of criminals. He thought that this could best be done through boys' clubs.

A COMPLETE REPLY

An exchange prints a little story, clipped from an unknown source, which is very good and perhaps also very old. Anyway, it is worth repeating.

It concerns an Omaha wholesale house and a customer merchant in an Iowa cross-roads town. A shipment of goods received by the customer was rejected as unsatisfactory.

The wholesaler prepared to institute suit for collection, and wrote to the railroad agent at the village for information about the arrival of the merchandies; to the president of the bank for information concerning the financial standing of the customer; to the mayor of the city asking him to recommend a good lawyer to handle the case; and to the merchant himself, threatening suit, if he did not make payment at once. This reply was received:

"I received your letter telling me I had better pay up.

"I am the railroad agent here and received the letter you wrote me about the shipment.

"I am the president and sole owner of the local bank and can assure you as to my financial standing.

"As the mayor of the city, I hesitate to refer you to a lawyer, since I am the only member of the bar in this vicinity.

"If I were not the pastor of the only church here, I would tell you to go to hell!"

ELECTRICAL PROGRESS

It is believed that electric consumption in 1930 was as great as in 1929, the year in which the previous high record was established. While sales to large industries suffered a decline, domestic and small industrial use of power showed impressive increases in all sections of the country.

In the last ten years per capita consumption of electric power has doubled. This is partly due to improved living and working standards and partly due to the splendid record made by the industry in extending and broadening its service and at the same time appreciably lowering rates.

It is interesting to note that 1930 was the first year in a decade in which hydro-electric output of power failed to gain. Electric energy produced by fuel plants, on the other hand, increased about 10 billion kilowatts. The inadequacy of most sources of water power in times of drought, coupled with remarkable progress made in utilizing coal, has resulted in steam being our most economical, efficient and generally satisfactory source of power in most states.

There is one side to electric progress in 1930 that deserves wide attention—the influence it has in advancing home life and in improving the status of the worker. Prosperity, progress and time for enjoyment, in the last analysis, depend on how much and how efficiently each citizen can produce. The workers of the United States lead those of all the rest of the world in this regard.

"Yes, I heard a noise and got up, and there, under the bed, I saw a man's leg."

Good heavens! The burglar's?

"No, my husband's. He had heard the niose, too."—Capper's Weekly.

ELECTRICAL EXPANSION

During 1930 approximately $850,000,000 dollars was expended by electric light and power companies of the United States for new construction, extension and betterment of facilities, according to an official statement just issued.

This is practically the same as was spent for like purposes in 1929, and involved large outlays for labor and materials which greatly aided in sustaining employment during the year.

Estimates already made as the result of a nation-wide survey of budgets now under preparation for 1931 indicate expenditures for the same purpose for the coming year of not less than $700,000,000, and they may considerably exceed that sum.

Factors affecting the amount of these expenditures, according to the statement, will be resumption of industrial power demand, the general investment buying of securities, and the assurance of a return upon investments sufficient to attract the required capital.

While industrial use of electricity fell off slightly during the past year, its home use showed a marked increase. During the past two years the average price per kilowatt hour throughout the country has been cut approximately 10 per cent, and is now the lowest in the history of the industry.

DEVELOPING RURAL ROADS

Just now the good roads movement, with especial attention being paid to farm-to-market roads, is making unprecedented progress. It has been stimulated by the drought and unemployment situations, as well as by the crying need for year-round, surfaced atreries of transportation for agriculture. Many states and hundreds of counties, in all sections of the country, are seeking ways and means of providing the farm with necessary roads as quickly and as economically as possible.

Norman M. Blaney, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, says that county road plans "should be designed so that the outlying territories will have access to the main highways." To achieve this, he points out, road committees should be formed, made up of fair-minded, unbiased citizens. It would be their duty to assemble facts and to decide just what roads are necessary for carrying on the business, social and economic life of their communities. Those roads which will serve the greatest number of people should naturally be improved first.

Modern science has given us the materials with which to construct good roads, passable in all weather, at a very low cost. Communities which take the lead in rural road constructions will be leaders in progress and future prosperity.

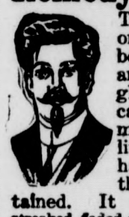
Husband: "Me."

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made



To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

The problem of automobile accident prevention, with its many related factors, will come in for much legislative consideration during 1931.

Many states have signified their intention of adopting laws requiring rigid examinations of drivers. This is believed by many authorities to be the best single means of keeping the dangerous driver off public highways.

In a few states compulsory insurance legislation will be considered, but in view of the unsatisfactory experience of Massachusetts, it is doubtful if it will be passed. More generally popular is the "safety responsibility law," now in effect in New York, Connecticut and other states. This law provides that a driver, after causing an accident, must provide proof of his financial responsibility before being allowed to again operate a car.

Laws for periodical inspections of cars, for controlling pedestrains walking on the highways, and for banishing ancient and dilapidated motor vehicles, have likewise been proposed and will receive due consideration.

In the aggregate, the vast volume of suggestions for improving highway safety gives good reason for optimism. Every step taken, no matter how small, means that at least a few lives are saved, a few pieces of property protected. The public is reaching a state of mind that gives no encouragement to those who, through carelessness and incompetence, sow death along the highways.

SCARING US TO DEATH

Clever advertising of antiseptics and other preparations reputed to save us from all the ills to which the flesh is heir has done a lot of harm, according to Dr. Shaw, professor of philosophy at the New York University.

While real science is relieving the human mind of many former bugaboos, modern "fear factories" are manufacturing new horrors to alarm the gullible and shorten their lives through sheer fright.

Just as we have been reassured by scientific control of yellow fever, smallpox, malaria and a host of old-time dangers, along comes the kill-joy tribe, warning us of the menace of dandruff, pyorrhea and halitosis.

Quoting the good doctor:

"Man is tormented with an array of drug-filled remedies which are supposed to act as antiseptics. The bathroom becomes a clinic, and every man a doctor in spite of himself. Now, dread in the heart is worse than dandruff in the hair, and fear in the soul is more unsightly than film on the teeth."

To which we may only add, as the high school girl would say: "Ain't it the truth."

Friend: "Whom does your little son look like?"

Happy Father: "His eyes are mine, the nose is my wife's, and his voice, I think, he got from our auto horn."—Railroad News.

That advertising is a service to the public

It is the kind of service that is of assistance.

This is the time for some business concerns to quit thinking that the public owes them something and think of what they owe the public.

The public expects to know about the business world and what they have to sell.

Out of consideration for the public, every business man should advertise.

The printed page is the proper place to advise the public who you are, where you are and what you have to sell.

Every business should look ahead. They must anticipate; they must employ well established policies of modern business; they should have faith in their city, faith in their business, confidence in themselves, and advertise.

SIDELIGHTS

George Sallee of Fresno, Cal., established a new "free fall" record by dropping 8,625 feet before his parachute opened in an exhibition stunt on Armistice day. This item is not belated because of any delay in getting back to earth on George's part, but because the government authorities have just made an official announcement of his baragraph readings.

Speaking of records, here is one for scientists to ponder and ambitious couples to shoot at: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kroger of Council Council Bluffs, Ia., have 10 children, five sets of twins, all living. They are Clyde and Claude, 18; Addie and Abbie, 16; Floyd and Lloyd, 11; Jean and Jeanette, 7; Donald Dean and Norma Jean, 3 months.

Apropos of recent celebrations in honor of the centenary of General Bolivar's death, the magazine Time recalls the mongrel dog, Cenizo, which for nearly ten years slept at the base of Bolivar's statute in Caracas, of which the animal seemed to be a self-appointed guardian. In recognition of Cenizo's loyalty he was made an honorary citizen of the Republic of Venezuela, an unusual honor for a dog.

The stop watch used to time speeches in the House of Representatives was stolen from the office of Speaker Longworth a few nights ago. Possibly it was only temporarily borrowed by some Congressman who wanted to slip in an unusually long-winded harangue.

That indefatigable collector of rare manuscripts and other treasures, Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia, recently paid $23,000 for a letter written by Thomas Jefferson. Some letters have netted even more money when written by indiscreet gentlement and later produced in court by mercenary ladies.

Confirming the opinion of many scientists, Dr. R. A. Reynolds of San Francisco declares that long study of criminals has convinced him that all of them are suffering from the improper functioning of one or more of the ductless glands. Possibly that accounts for the fact that nearly everybody seems to be a little "off" in some respects.

The famed airplane "City of Chicago" which once held the world's endurance flight record, got into the news again recently. It was used by Miller Stephenson and Miss Rankin, who were married in its cabin as the plane soared over the town of Sparta, Ill., In this instance the bride and groom might well be referred to in hackneyed newspaper phrase as the "high contracting parties."

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

Eighteen new direct toll circuits between points in Georgia, terminating in Atlanta, have been completed recently and placed in service.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has the largest dial telephone switchboard of any public utility in New England. It has a capacity of about 17,000 calls a day.

Two new direct telephone circuits have been stablished between New Orleans and Baton Rouge, making a total of eleven now in service between the two cities.

"Local Investment—Try First at Home"

"Try First at Home" has become a national slogan. It was originated to counteract the very human tendency that "the grass across the way is greener"; it has become a national slogan because it has proved itself!

There is only one place in the world where you can spend your dollars AND SEE THEM WORK FOR YOU. Where you can have them return to you with big dividends. That is in your community. They are emblems of your civic loyalty and interest. They work for you by giving.you a greater and more prosperous community—good city government, with law and order—improved schools and churches—better streets—and increased service and business facilities.

NOWHERE ELSE is the purchasing power of your dollar greater than in your own town!
NOWHERE ELSE can the comforts, conveniences and necessities of life be secured at a lower cost!
NOWHERE ELSE will your money buy for you the careful, personal service characterized by individual interest that is rendered you by your community!

What sense is there in sending these dollars out of town for the things you need, when your local business and professional men can supply these needs—yes, supply them with better quality and at a lower cost? They do not say "Keep your dollars here"—they merely say

TRY FIRST AT HOME

The glamour of "out-of-town" shopping fades for the man or woman who realizes that the dollar spent "out of town" never returns to benefit either them or the community in which they live.

The "out-of-town" dollar goes into the structure of some other community's prosperity, depriving OUR community of just that much business energy and building force, and in no way making it possible for OUR OWN COMMUNITY INTERESTS TO INCREASE THE VALUE OF OUR SERVICE TO YOU!

TRY FIRST AT HOME—the "out-of-town" dollar is gone forever; the "home-spent" dollar returns to you in

ROMANCE OF OUR FIRST PRESIDENT

So much has been written on the more spectacular phases of George Washington's life that it is sometimes difficult to appreciate the really human qualities of the man. One of the finest stories ever told of Washington is that of his courtship of Martha Curtis and their subsequent marriage. In this story are revealed some of the best and most attractive qualities of America's greatest hero. The firm, strong-willed leader of men who unflinchingly would face death on the battlefield found that he needed the companionship and helpful counsel of a woman. Fortuantely, he met the sort of woman he wanted to preside in his home, and they were married on January 6, 1759.

The story of George Washington's marriage to Martha Custis is told by the division of information and publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in a statement intended to call attention to the 172nd anniversary of this notable event.

George Washington first met the Widow Custis at the home of Major Chamberlayne in May, 1758. The lady had then been a widow for about a year. She had married Colonel Daniel Parke Curtis when she was 17 years old, and was left at his death eight years later with two small children and a considerable fortune. Although it is said that Washington was formally presented to Mrs. Custis for the first time by Chamberlayne, it is almost certain that the famous soldier and the charming widow had at least heard of each other before that time.

Fate must have taken a hand in the events of that day in May when Colonel Washington was detained at William's Ferry over the Pamunkey by his friend, Major Chamberlayne, who earnestly pressed upon the young man an invitation to stay his journey and enjoy the hospitality of the plantation. But Washington was hastening to Williamsburg, where he intended to ask the governor in person for men and supplies for the frontier, which previous urgent letters had failed to obtain. Chamberlayne was insistent, however, and when it appeared that all his importunities must fail to alter the plans of the Colonel, he informed the latter that he was then entertaining the charming Mrs. Custis. This argument, apparently, was potent enough to convince the young warrior where all others were in vain, and Washington consented to remain only long enough to partake of the meal which was then being prepared.

Bishop, the personal servant of Washington, who had served under Braddock, was instructed to hold the Colonel's horse in readiness for a speedy departure as soon as dinner was over. The old soldier knew very well his master's reputation for punctuality, and since the business at Williamsburg was important, he fully expected that this wait would be a brief one. But the dinner hour passed, the sun sank lower in the west, and still Washington lingered. At last in the warm dusk of the May evening, the faithful Bishop received orders to stable the horses for the night and the journey was postponed until the next day.

There is something amusing in this scene of budding romance, although it is no wonder that Washington tarried. Martha Custis was beautiful, attractive and accomplished. She has been described as being short, slightly plump and of engaging personality. Certainly the Colonel's interest in the lady was matched by her own interest in the renowned young soldier, and such mutual agreeableness was surely sufficient to crowd prosaic business into the background.

However, the Governor had to be visited, so the next day found Washington on his way to Williamsburg. But as soon as the business which took him there was taken care of, the now fully smitten Colonel proceeded to the White House, the Custis home on the Pamunkey, where it appears Mrs. Custis expected him. When he left there he must have been in high spirits, for he took with him the lady's promise to marry him as soon as he should finish his military service on the Ohio.

Washington did not see his betrothed again for several months, for it was December before he returned from this expedition. His duties fulfilled, the Colonel resigned from the army and hastened plans for the wedding. It was during Washington's absence on the frontier that he wrote the only letter to Martha which alone remains of his prenuptial correspondence with her. This dignified and gravely tender note is dated Fort Cumberland, July 20, 1758:

"We have begun our march to the Ohio. A courier is starting for Williamsburg, and I embrace the opportunity to send a few words to one whose life is now inseparable from mine. Since that happy hour when we made our pledges to each other, my thoughts have been continually going to you as to another self. That Allpowerful Providence may keep us both in safety, is the prayer of your faithful and ever affectionate friend,

G. WASHINGTON."

It still is uncertain whether the marriage occurred in Saint Peter's church or at the bride's home, the White House. At any rate, the Rev. Mr. Mossom, rector of Saint Peter's, officiated at the ceremony. Jared Sparks, one of Washington's earliest biographers, is the authority for the date of the wedding, which he established as January 6. But no matter whether the wedding took place at the White House or in the church, it was a notable event and was attended by a great number of Virginia's prominent people. The Governor himself was there, with civil and military authorities, and many of the socially elite. Only a traditional account of the festivities on that occasion exists today, but certainly the celebration left nothing lacking.

Martha's wedding gown has been thus described by one writer: ". . .a satin quilt, over which a heavy white silk, interwoven with threads of silver, was looped back with white satin ribbons, richly ebrocaded in a leaf pattern. Her bodice was of plain satin, and the brocade was fastened on the bust with a stiff butterfly bow of the ribbon. Delicate lace finished the low, square neck. There were close elbow sleeves revealing a puff and frill of lace. Strings of pearls were woven in and out of her powdered hair. Her high-heeled slippers were of white satin, with brilliant buckles."

The attractive apeparance of the bride was equalled by that of the tall, well-built bridegroom. Always particular over his dress, Washington, on this occasion, was elegantly arrayed, and, according to all accounts, was the most gallantly magnificent figure in all that assemblage.

At last Mount Vernon had a mistress, but months elapsed after the wedding before the young bride saw her future home. Washington had just been elected to the House of Burgesses, so the young couple remained in Williamsburg while the Chamber remained in session until May. When Washington did return with his wife to his beautiful estate on the Potomac, the place became home to both of them for the remainder of their lives.

Washington's marriage was a singularly happy one. In Martha he found all those womanly qualities which were needed to supplement those of his own character. Who can measure the value of the encouragement she must have given him during the weary days of the Revolution? Certainly she was always a faithful and devoted wife, and the Father of his Country owed a great deal to her for the measure of success he attained.

Among the anniversaries of the many important dates in the life of George Washington, this one of his wedding holds an element of human interest which no doubt is appreciated by all his countrymen.

ENGINEER REPORTS ON HIGHWAY STUDY

Conclusions as to the probable requirements of the California state highway system for the next ten years are contained in a report recently issued by State Highway Engineer C. H. Purcell. The study was made in accordance with a joint resolution passed by the last legislature.

The study covers the ten year period ending with the fiscal year 1940. Estimates developed during the course of the study show that, in order to properly handle the traffic which the state highways will be called upon to carry during the ten years, the expenditure of $313,565,906 should be made for construction and reconstruction of state highways. The anticipated revenues from all sources available for the accomplishment of this work are $320,352,751.

Estimated cost of construction and reconstruction is based on the minimum standards necessary to economically and satisfactorily serve traffic. Many roads will receive only stage construction, reconstruction, and maintenance, awaiting the time when the increase in annual revenues accumulates the necessary surplus for permanent types of improvement. Some roads will still have a low type of surface although they will be of a type temporarily adequate for traffic requirements.

The study sets up a tentative program for guidance in future preparation of the biennial state highway budgets and furnishes definite information on what present financing methods can accomplish. The estimate of total revenue from present sources available to the state for state highway purposes in the ten year period is $422,015,334. This is for all purposes in connection with state highway administration: construction, reconstruction and maintenance. Deducting from this amount general maintenance, administration and 10 per cent of the secondary construction revenues for distribution to joint highway districts, leaves the balance of $320,352,751 for state highway construction and reconstruction, including right of way and engineering expense.

Applying the revenues between the north and the south and between primary and secondary roads as required by the Breed bill, the estimated costs so classified shows that reconstruction and construction of primary highways, both in the North and the South section, can be brought to an adequate standard within the ten year period for traffic during this period with a surplus on South primary construction and reconstruction. On secondary construction, a deficit of over $38,000,000 is encountered in the North section of the state; whereas, the secondary roads in the South can be brought to an adequate standard within the ten year period.

During the next ten years, moderate changes in the expected volume, character, and speed of traffic would not alter the type of roads, and, therefore, the costs given in the estimates. An increase above the probable estimated revenues sufficient to bring about an adequate status of highways sooner than therein set forth, would have to be a material regular increase. This is improbable under present stautory provisions and is not indicated by the records of revenue collections in the past. A decrease in the estimated revenues would create a certain deficit, while the demand for improvement will still be as insistent and necessary as is now predicted. Such a deficit would protract indefinitely the period of attaining the satisfactory status. Such a contingency should not induce an over-optimistic attitude nor permit withdrawal for other purposes from present anticipated revenues.

Commenting on this study, State Highway Engineer Purcell had the following to say: "Comparison of these carefully prepared estimates of cost and revenue derived independently of each other, leaves no doubt that, with revenues as now made avilable, a very cautious and conservative program must be pursued in state highway improvement and that any other course or a diversion of highway funds to other purposes will jeopardize the program of improving and constructing the state highways to a capacity adequate to take care of traffic developing during this ten year period."

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE NETS $5,300

Receipts from this year's annual Christmas Seal sale in San Mateo county has reached the $5,300 mark, according to figures released by Mrs. Carl Martin, treasurer of the San Mateo Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

"Returns are still coming in," Mrs. Martin said, "from persons who neglected to return the money for the stamps during the Christmas holidays."

Funds are used for the support of the San Mateo Preventorium, where there are accommodations for 14 boys and 14 girls who have been exposed to tuberculosis and are marked by the white plague.

One of the biggest accomplishments of the association the past year was the building of the new home which was beautifully furnished with a dormitory for boys and one for girls.

RUTH NICHOLS' RECORDS

By breaking transcontinental flying records for women, both eastward and westward, Miss Ruth Nichols, of New York, carries off the premier aviation honors of her sex in a year replete with remarkable performances.

Her westward flight from New York to California was made in a half minute less than 17 hours actual flying time, while her eastward journey required only 13 hours and 22 minutes in the air. In the latter flight her average speed was close to 200 miles an hour.

Only one man, Captain Frank M. Hawks, has covered the transcontinental route in less flying time. Miss Nichols exceeded the speed made by Colonl Lindbergh in his flight last April, but he carried Mrs. Lindbergh as a passenger and was not really seeking a speed record.

Three women have held transcontinental speed records within a few months—Miss Laura Ingalls, an American girl; then Mrs. Keith Miller, an English woman, and now Miss Nichols, whose speed was almost twice as great as that of Miss Ingalls.

More substantial buildings are planned for the recently devastated earthquake regions of Italy.

Members of Congress ought to be in better humor after collecting mileage for their holiday trips back home.

The house was very badly damaged by smoke and is all black and sooty. Mrs. Brandt had been ironing all morning before she left for her mother's home. She thinks that the ironing board may have been scorched and smouldering under the ironing board cover and may have started the fire. No one was injured, as the house was empty, but the house was badly damaged and is now being renovated.

SMART SHOP GETS READY FOR SPRING

Style headquarters in the Daly City Theatre building are just as much a magnet these days as in other seasons. Mothers and daughters of our town who know what a modish ready-to-wear garment really is lost little time in establishing connections with the Pollyann Smart Shop, and no regrets have ever been expressed since the opening some months ago.

Spring is approaching much faster than many of us realize, and what a spring it promises to be, after the winter. To properly signalize the cold and chill of an unusually severe season, the gladdest of all the year, our women folk are in the habit of putting in down-to-date frocks, which are, as the modiste says, suitable for any occasion.

Special care has been taken in ordering the spring stock to have on hand the exact dresses experience has shown should be provided in Daly City. Each section has its own way of expressing its notion of beauty, and our town is no different from others. Its women have an individual style of attiring themselves.

Only a visit to the handsomely appointed store will bring a full realization of all the good things in garments that are available for this spring time. Each dress has an originality all its own.

The family of William Young, of Niantic avenue, are receiving the sympathy of their many friends upon the death of a beloved wife and mother. Mrs. Gertrude Young had been seriously ill for the past several months. Deceased leaves a husband and a grown family of sons and daughters to mourn her passing. The funeral was held last Thursday at 2 P. M. Interment was in Olivet Memorial Park.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, JANUARY 16, 1931 NUMBER 25

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

More Novelty Needed

Nurse: "Don't you like your new baby sister, Johnnie?"

Johnnie: "She's all right, but I wish she had been a boy. Willie Smith has got a new sister, and now he'll think I'm tying to copy him."

STERLING Plaster Board—a good grade at right prices.

Now You Tell One

Northerner: "Pretty mild winters you have down here."

Southerner: "Mild! Do you call two feet of snow mild?"

Northerner: "Two feet! Say, man, the snow was so deep in our country last winter that the farmers had to jack up their cows to milk 'em."

A home is a safe investment for family savings when it is built durable and at reasonable cost. Dependable lumber construction offers certain assurance of permanence, with low first cost and a minimum of maintenance expense.

"Say, Dad, I got in trouble at school today, and it's all your fault. Remember when I asked you how much a million dollars was?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, the teacher asked me today, and 'helluva lot' isn't the right answer."

Baldwin—the Sootless Coal.

"Modern youth just lives in the present," says one of our novelists. Especially when the present happens to be a car.

A negro mammy told an agent she wanted some fire insurance.

"That's fine," he replied, "what do you want to insure?"

"My husband," she replied.

"You want life insurance then," he reasoned.

"No, suh, I wants fiuh insurance. My Mose done been fiuhed twice dis week already."

Wealthy Miser: "I never give to missions."

Collector: "Then take something out of the bag, sir. The money is for heathens."
